BECKY R. THORSON, United States Magistrate Judge.

In this action under 28 U.S.C. § 2241, Petitioner Alonzo Jackson contends that prison officials abused their discretion by reducing the length of his pre-release placement in a residential reentry center (“RRC” or “halfway house”). (Doc. No. 1, Habeas Pet.) For the reasons stated below, this Court recommends that Petitioner’s § 2241 action be dismissed for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, or in the alternative, be denied on the merits.

BACKGROUND

Petitioner is a federal prisoner who, at the time he filed this action, was incarcerated at the Federal Correctional Institution in Sandstone, Minnesota (“FCI Sandstone”). (Habeas Pet. 1; Doc. No. 7, Decl. of Jon Gustin (“Gustin Decl.”) ¶ 22, Ex. B.) Petitioner was convicted of conspiracy to distribute and possess with intent to distribute heroin in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Wisconsin. (Id.) He is serving a 40-month and 14-day term of imprisonment. (Id.) His projected release date is October 21, 2018. (Id.) This is an early release date pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 3621(e) for the successful completion of a Residential Drug Abuse Program (“RDAP”). (Id.)

Inmates can be designated to an RRC as a pre-release placement at the end of their sentence. (Gustin Decl. ¶¶ 5, 8.) They also may be eligible for home confinement for a portion of their pre-release RRC placement. (Id. ¶ 5.) At RRCs, staff can help inmates with the basic needs of securing identification, employment, and housing, and provide other programs and services, such as community drug programming. (Id. ¶ 9.) In the Second Chance Act of 2007 (“SCA”), Congress increased the maximum allowable time for such placements by providing the Bureau of Prisons (“BOP”) with authority to grant “to the extent practicable” an inmate up to twelve months in a pre-release RRC placement at the end of the inmate’s sentence. 18 U.S.C. § 3624(c)(1); (Gustin Decl. ¶ 5). The SCA also authorizes the BOP to place an inmate on home confinement for a period of ten percent of the inmate’s term of imprisonment or six months at the end of the sentence, whichever is shorter. 18 U.S.C. § 3624(c)(2); (Gustin Decl. ¶ 5.)

An inmate’s request for RRC or home confinement placement is evaluated using the following criteria: (1) the resources of the facility contemplated; (2) the nature and circumstances of the offense; (3) the history and characteristics of the prisoner; (4) any statement by the court that imposed the sentence concerning the purposes for which the sentence to imprisonment was determined to be warranted or recommending a type of penal or correctional facility as appropriate; and (5) any pertinent policy statement issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(2) of Title 28. 18 U.S.C. § 3621(b); 18 U.S.C. § 3624(c)(6); (Gustin Decl. ¶ 6). Inmates are evaluated for pre-release RRC placement and/or home confinement 17–19 months before their projected release dates. (Gustin Decl. ¶ 8.) After an inmate’s individualized assessment for pre-release placement under the § 3621(b) factors has been conducted, the institution’s recommendation is forwarded to the Residential Reentry Manager’s (“RRM”) office overseeing the proposed RRC. (Id. ¶ 10.) RRM staff will finalize the recommendation after considering § 3621(b)(1), i.e., the resources of the facility contemplated. (Id.)

Congress also mandates, subject to available funding, that the BOP “shall provide residential substance abuse treatment . . . for all eligible prisoners.” 18 U.S.C. § 3621(e)(1)(C). The incentive for prisoners to enroll in the RDAP is a possible reduction in sentence of up to one year. 18 U.S.C. § 3621(e)(2)(B); (Gustin Decl. ¶ 9). To successfully complete RDAP, inmates must complete a minimum of 120 days in a Transitional Drug Abuse Treatment (“TDAT”) program while in community confinement, such as an RRC or home confinement. 28 C.F.R. § 550.53(a)(3). If inmates cannot fulfill the TDAT portion of RDAP before their provisional § 3621 release date, the provisional release date can be adjusted “by the least amount of time necessary to allow inmates to fulfill their treatment obligations.” 28 C.F.R. § 550.55(c)(3); (Gustin Decl. ¶ 9).

BOP Unit Team Staff reviewed Petitioner under the § 3621(b) factors for a pre-release RRC placement on December 15, 2017. (Gustin Decl. ¶ 23, Ex. C.) Unit Team Staff recommended that Petitioner be placed into a pre-release RRC near Stevens Point, Wisconsin, on April 25, 2018, after completion of the RDAP. (Id.) Unit Team Staff noted that Petitioner had been approved relocation of his supervision from the Eastern District of Wisconsin to the Western District of Wisconsin to reside with his girlfriend, he had his GED, was participating in RDAP, paid his court-imposed financial assessment, and took a few education courses. (Id.) They also noted Petitioner has been encouraged to maintain family ties through telephone, email, letters, and visits as often as possible. (Id.) At the time this recommendation was made, Petitioner's projected release date was October 21, 2018. (Gustin Decl. ¶ 24, Ex. C at 1.)

FCI Sandstone's recommendation was referred to the Chicago RRM's Office to be finalized after consideration of the § 3621(b)(1) factor. (Id. ¶ 24.) The RRM Staff determined the most appropriate RRC for Petitioner would be Wisconsin Community Services, Wisconsin. (Id.) That facility, however, had been operating over contract capacity, and the RRM Staff was managing bed space allocation by adjusting inmates' pre-release RRC placement dates. (Id.) Because resources were not available in the community for a longer placement, the RRM Staff determined that Petitioner's pre-release RRC placement should be postponed until June 20, 2018 (reducing the original recommendation of 180 days to a pre-release RRC placement of 122 days).<sup>1</sup> (Id.)

<sup>1</sup> Petitioner claims that this reduction occurred just two weeks before his anticipated April 25, 2018 RRC placement date. (Habeas Pet. 7.) Petitioner filed his habeas petition on April 30, 2018 (Doc. No. 1), and this Court granted his request to expedite. (Doc. No. 4.) The Court received the parties' responsive briefs on May 8 and May 17, 2018, pursuant to an expedited briefing schedule. (See id.; see also Doc. Nos. 6, 7, 9.)

This new placement date still allowed Petitioner time to complete the TDAT portion of RDAP, and attend to other release needs, prior to his scheduled October 21, 2018, release date. (Id.)

ANALYSIS

Petitioner argues that the BOP abused its discretion by not following the factors enumerated in 18 U.S.C. § 3621(b) when deciding on his RRC placement. (Habeas Pet. 6–7; Doc. No. 9, Pet'r's Resp. to Mem. in Opp'n ("Pet'r's Resp.") 7.) Petitioner also argues that his RRC placement was not considered on an individual basis, and the amount of time for placement is not "of sufficient duration to provide the greatest likelihood of successful reintegration into the community." 28 C.F.R. § 570.22; (Habeas Pet. 7; Pet'r's Resp. 8). Respondent argues that the petition should be dismissed for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction because BOP decisions on RRC and home placement are not subject to review under the Administrative Procedures Act ("APA"). (Doc. No. 6, Resp't's Resp. to Petition ("Resp't's Resp.") 9–12.) Alternatively, Respondent argues that the petition should be denied on the merits because the BOP properly complied with its duty to review Petitioner for pre-release placement, and Petitioner has no constitutional right to RRC or home confinement placement. (Id. at 12–17.)

A. Petitioner’s Petition Should be Dismissed for Lack of Subject-Matter Jurisdiction<sup>2</sup>

Under the APA, courts can review decisions of federal administrative agencies to determine whether they are “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A). APA review is not allowed, however, where judicial review is precluded by statute, or where agency action is committed to agency discretion by law. 5 U.S.C. § 701(a).

One statute that precludes judicial review is 18 U.S.C. § 3625, which provides that the “provisions of sections 554 and 555 and 701 through 706 of title 5, United States Code, do not apply to the making of any determination, decision, or order under this subchapter.” The phrase “this subchapter” refers to subchapter C, 18 U.S.C. §§ 3621–3626, which generally governs BOP authority with respect to federal prisoners. See Martin v. Gerlinski, 133 F.3d 1076, 1079 (8th Cir. 1998) (explaining that § 3625, which exempts “any determination, decision, or order under [§§ 3621–3626]” from review under the APA, “precludes judicial review of [BOP] adjudicative decisions”); Reeb v. Thomas, 636 F.3d 1224, 1227 (9th Cir. 2001) (“To find that prisoners can bring habeas petitions under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 to challenge the BOP’s discretionary determinations made pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3621 would be inconsistent with the language of 18 U.S.C. § 3625.”). Several courts in this district have held that § 3625 precludes judicial review of the BOP's discretionary decisions under §§ 3621 and 3624 in the context of RRC and home placement. See Simon v. LaRiva, No. 16-cv-146 (ADM/TNL), 2016 WL 1626819, at *6 (D. Minn. Mar. 10, 2016) ("The BOP's decision ultimately to place Petitioner in home confinement for three months, rather than six months, was discretionary and this Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over Petitioner's challenge to the BOP's application of the § 3621(b) factors and other considerations in reaching that decision."); Crawford v. Nicklin, No. 13-2462 (JRT/SER), 2014 WL 538699, at *7 (D. Minn. Feb. 11, 2014) ("Courts in this District have also found § 3625 precludes judicial review of BOP discretionary decisions under § 3621.") (collecting cases); Barakat v. Fisher, No. 13-1296 (JNE/SER), 2013 WL 6058932, at *1 (D. Minn. Nov. 18, 2013) ("To the extent Barakat challenges the particular determination in his case of the RRC placement, the Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction to review the [BOP's] discretionary decision . . . ."); Ambrose v. Jett, No. 13-2343 (PJS/JSM), 2013 WL 6058989, at *7 (D. Minn. Nov. 15, 2013) ("[T]his Court does not have jurisdiction to review the ultimate discretionary decision by the BOP under §§ 3621(b) or 3264(c) to place Ambrose in an RRC or in home confinement placement.").

<sup>2</sup> Petitioner filed this action in the correct venue, and 28 U.S.C. § 2241 is the correct statutory vehicle for Petitioner’s claims. See Nichols v. Symmes, 553 F.3d 647, 649 (8th Cir. 2009) (“[A] claim attacking the execution of [a] sentence should be brought in a § 2241 petition in the jurisdiction of incarceration.”).

As noted above, the five factors for BOP placement review are as follows: (1) the resources of the facility contemplated; (2) the nature and circumstances of the offense; (3) the history and characteristics of the prisoner; (4) any statement by the court that imposed the sentence concerning the purposes for which the sentence to imprisonment was determined to be warranted or recommending a type of penal or correctional facility as appropriate; and (5) any pertinent policy statement issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(2) of Title 28. 18 U.S.C. § 3621(b).

Pursuant to those factors, on December 15, 2017, the BOP recommended pre-release RRC placement for a variety of reasons, including Petitioner's completion of his GED, participation in educational programs, completion of financial responsibility payments, participation in RDAP, and because he had been approved for supervision relocation from the Eastern District of Wisconsin to the Western District of Wisconsin to reside with his girlfriend. (Gustin Decl. ¶ 23, Ex. C.) The BOP also noted Petitioner was encouraged to maintain family ties through telephone, email, letters, and visits as often as possible. (Id.) The BOP's initial recommendation was for pre-release placement on April 25, 2018, with a release date of October 21, 2018. Subsequent to that initial recommendation, Petitioner's pre-release placement date was adjusted to June 20, 2018, due to the availability of beds at the Wisconsin Community Services, Wisconsin RRC. Thus, the BOP considered the § 3621(b) factors, relying primarily on the history and characteristics of the prisoner and the resources of the contemplated facility. This is a discretionary determination not subject to review in federal court. See Simon, 2016 WL 1626819, at *5 (“So long as the BOP made an individualized determination in accordance with the appropriate considerations, this Court does not have jurisdiction to evaluate the BOP's exercise of discretion.”).<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Petitioner argues that the reduction in pre-release RRC placement from 180 days to 122 days due to facility resources shows that he was not considered on an individual basis, the BOP recommendation was “perfunctory,” and that the BOP did not act in good (Footnote Continued on Next Page)

B. Alternatively, the Petition Should be Denied on the Merits

Section 3625 generally precludes judicial review of BOP discretionary decisions, but it does not preclude judicial review for any allegations that the BOP's action is contrary to established federal law, violates the Constitution, or exceeds statutory authority. See Ambrose, 2013 WL 6058989, at *7 (citing Tapia v. United States, 131 S. Ct. 2382, 2390–91 (2011); Reeb, 636 F.3d at 1228). As discussed in the previous section, the BOP has been given the statutory authority to “designate the place of the prisoner’s imprisonment.” 18 U.S.C. § 3621(b). RRCs and home confinement are considered places of confinement or imprisonment pursuant to this authority. See id. § 3624(c); Elwood v. Jeter, 386 F.3d 842, 846 (8th Cir. 2004). Furthermore, Petitioner does not have a constitutionally protected liberty interest in serving his sentence at a particular institution. Meachum v. Fano, 427 U.S. 215, 224 (1976); Moorman v. Thalacker, 83 F.3d 970, 973 (8th Cir. 1996). Therefore, while it is unfortunate that Petitioner’s RRC placement date was reduced just two weeks before his anticipated transfer, this action should be denied on the merits, if not dismissed for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, because Petitioner has no constitutional right to a pre-release RRC or home confinement placement. See, faith. (Habeas Pet. 7; Pet’r’s Resp. 7–9.) Petitioner, however, was considered on an individual basis pursuant to the factors set forth in § 3621(b), one of which is the resources of the facility contemplated for placement. Consideration of facility resources is part of the individualized placement decision. There is no evidence that the BOP was constrained to capping Petitioner’s time in an RRC placement for a certain amount of time. Therefore, this case is distinguishable from Krueger v. Martinez, 665 F. Supp. 2d 477 (M.D. Pa. 2009), a case Petitioner relies on.

e.g., Davis v. Bledsoe, No. 3:11-CV-1864, 2012 WL 175401, * 4 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 20, 2012) (“The Magistrate Judge correctly determines that Petitioner does not have a constitutional right to RRC placement and that the Second Chance Act, while authorizing pre-release placement, does not mandate that he be released into an RRC.”).

RECOMMENDATION

For the reasons stated above, and based on the files, records, and proceedings herein, IT IS HEREBY RECOMMENDED that:

1. Petitioner’s Petition for a writ of habeas corpus (Doc. No. 1) be DISMISSED for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, or in the alternative, be DENIED on the merits; and
2. This action be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

Date: June 8, 2018.
